Showcase 2010 Update

Registration Now Open for Showcase 2010!
April 6, 2010
8:00am—1:00pm
Memorial Union

Sharing innovative ideas, learning from others, and collaborating to make the campus work more effectively are at the center of the eleventh annual Showcase on Tuesday, April 6, at the Memorial Union.

“People draw inspiration and gain ideas from Showcase each year that help them solve problems and work more effectively,” says Maury Cotter, director of the Office of Quality Improvement. “Showcase is one place where we actively promote and encourage the ‘stealing’ of ideas.”

Showcase 2010 is designed to provide participants with a wide variety of tips, techniques and hands-on demonstrations.

The free event will offer poster exhibits, tech demos, workshops, guest speakers and a box lunch.

Showcase 2010 Guest Speakers

The Showcase 2010 guest speakers will focus on how to address complex, cross cutting issues. Examples include current campus initiatives such as global health and sustainability—to illustrate how to engage across disciplines and missions.

A word from Chancellor Biddy Martin

“UW-Madison is a world-class institution. To sustain our preeminence in challenging times, we need to use our resources wisely and efficiently, and ensure that excellence defines everything we do. To that end, our campus priorities include a focus on rethinking how we do things, including administrative and academic practices, policies and structures.

Showcase will provide you with an opportunity to share your examples and successes, and to learn from others at the same time. I hope you will consider participating in Showcase.”

Highlights from Last Year’s Showcase

Last year’s Showcase was attended by over 450 people, and there were 51 poster exhibits and technology demonstrations. Below is a sample of some of the Showcase 2009 posters developed using the electronic template.

- Administrative Process Redesign (APR) Project
- The Conney Project on Jewish Arts
- UW-Madison Community Outreach Work with Spectrum Magazine
- UW-Madison Arts Institute

Showcase is an annual event sponsored by the Office of Quality Improvement and Office of Human Resource Development.
