and search for “Showcase”

Sponsored by the Office of Quality Improvement and the Office of Human Resource Development, this free event attracts hundreds of faculty and staff to poster exhibits, workshops, and special presentations. Lunch is included for those who register for the Keynote Presentation. Come to Showcase 2012 — our 13th Showcase — and take home a wealth of ideas.

Poster Exhibits
Sixty exhibitors from every corner of campus will share their best practices, creating an opportunity to learn from each other and build on proven solutions. Now more than ever, we are looking for ways to enhance excellence while improving our capacity and advancing our mission through programs such as Administrative Process Redesign, Administrative Excellence, and Educational Innovation.

Breakout Sessions
Successful innovations and improvements will be shared by colleagues across campus in a series of 45-minute breakout sessions. Learn about their practices and tools that you can use.

Keynote Presentation
Chancellor David Ward led UW-Madison into its first strategic planning and quality improvement efforts in the early 1990’s. Now, we have the gift of his leadership as Interim Chancellor, and with it his experience with our own campus along with a national and international context gained during his presidency with the American Council on Education. With that broad perspective, he is providing a compelling case for change, and encouraging campus-wide efforts to rethink not only our administrative processes, but also innovations in our educational mission.

“We need to act boldly to maintain our edge. Some extraordinary efforts are already under way, but -- as in most other research institutions -- educational innovations tend to be isolated within specific programs or among committed individuals. I hope we can celebrate, share and expand upon many existing innovations.” Showcase is a venue to help do just that.
